題目：State Ownership and Trade Credit

概要：We find that state ownership is positively associated with the provision of trade credit. The positive relation between state ownership and trade credit is stronger in countries with less developed financial markets, with greater government ownership of banks, and during systemic banking crises. This suggests that trade credit from state-owned enterprises (SOEs) provides alternative sources of funds when access to finance is limited. We also identify that SOEs provide greater amounts of trade credit in countries with left-wing governments and in more collectivist societies. This supports the contention that governments use credit-granting by SOEs to promote political and social objectives.
